The new U. B. church in Logan, rapidly approaching completion, is plastered with Rock plaster, from the manufacturing firm of Columbus, whose advertisement appears elsewhere. It will pay to do so.

Noting the visit of Dr. Mansfield at Marysville the Tribune says: "We had the pleasure of meeting our old acquaintance, Dr. Mansfield, of Logan, one of the prominent physicians of his section of the State, who is in our city this week, visiting his relative, grandma Mansfield, now in the 90th year of her age. Dr. and his wife have many friends in our city who are always glad to meet them."

The military leaves this week but our farm products remain a standing army of prosperity with our people. Let us encamp our products at the Fair Grounds. The golden grain is prouder decoration than shoulder strap or brass button. Our Halls and grounds shall be filled for the admiration of the thousands with the trophies of our industry on many a hard worked field.

Now get ready for our Fair. We make display, demonstration, decoration to the transient troops. This is all right. But we have a glory greater than these in the product of our farmers and mechanics, in the handiwork of our ladies. Let us all unite in making our Fair a festival, an exhibit more to our credit than camps, with all the panoply of war.

George Hartman, at the East End, invites the public to come and see him. He has not only Electric Light yet, but he has the best brands of liquors in the market, and pleasant accommodations for parties of gentlemen who in their walks step out east to see the beauties of that part of our town. The old soldiers will always find here a cheerful company, as this is headquarters for the 14th and 15th at well.

The horses at the encampment were about the most suggestive feature of the exhibition. They were raw boned, ring spavined, scarred, branded, lame, hot, bungled. They looked as if they had tailed up a Wilson raid through the feminine districts of Russia. The horses at our fair will be in striking contrast. Here the high stepper will display his mettle, the racer his speed, the farm horse his strength and docility. The horse in his perfect proportions is the most beautiful animal and the most useful. He will be on exhibition at our fair.

The Army of the Cumberland. The survivors of this gallant army will hold the 23d annual reunion on the battle field of Chickamauga, on the 15th and 16th of September.

A very large attendance is expected. Gen. Rosencrans is president and Gen. Boynton secretary of the association.

It is proposed to make Chickamauga and the battle field around Chattanooga a National Park, and the forthcoming meeting will have much to do in forwarding the movement.

Half fare rates will be furnished on all railroads. Comrades proposing to attend should notify Gen. Boynton, at Washington City, or Cap. Muller, Chattanooga, so that accommodations may be secured.

DISASTROUS WRECK

On the C. H. V. & T. Railroad Two Miles South of Here.

A FREIGHT TRAIN GOES THROUGH A HIGH BRIDGE INTO THE HOCKING RIVER. ONE TRAMP KILLED. TRAINMEN BADLY INJURED.

(We take the following from Tuesday's Journal which very exactly and fully details the most disastrous accident that has happened on our road. The work of repair began at once, and marvelous as it may appear, trains were crossing Tuesday afternoon. A new iron bridge will be built.)

At 8.45 Friday evening a fatal wreck occurred on the River division of the C. H. V. & T., two miles south of Logan. The place where the wreck occurred was at bridge No. 2 which crosses the Hocking half a mile south of Old Town junction. The fatal train was No. 63 in charge of Conductor Walt Cushman, with Uriah Brown at the throttle and Fred Moorehead, fireman. The train consisted of a caboose and eighteen cars, and was loaded with steel billets, railroad spikes, brick, sand and a car of shoes. The train was preceded only 30 minutes by the regular north bound passenger train and three freight trains. Had the bridge gone down with one of the heavy passenger trains of Sunday, the loss of life would have been appalling. The train approached the long bridge at the rate of eight or ten miles an hour and when the engine was half on the north pier, sixteen cars dropped into the deep river below with a crash that could be heard almost two miles. The crew in the front end went down and all were injured. Engineer Brown had his jaw broken in two places; Fireman Moorehead his right arm broken and Brakeman Norris several contusions about the head. The bridge was a combination of iron and wood, the top part of which crashed down through the cab knocking the occupants in every direction.

Two tramps who were stealing a ride, went down with the wreck. One of them named George H. Guest was killed and the other, Mike Maher, severely injured. By letters found on the dead man it was learned he was from Birmingham, N. Y. Maher escaped from the wreck by squeezing through an opening which seemed scarcely large enough to admit a man's head. He is now at the infirmary. His injuries consisted of several bad bruises and scratches about the head. He will come around all right. Guest was taken from the wreck by the workmen at 11 o'clock Friday night and placed on a box car door to await the coroner's verdict on Saturday morning. The verdict was that Guest came to his death by drowning. One eye was knocked out and several horrible gashes in the left side of the head and temple. From a letter from Guest's mother, found in his pocket, at the inquest it was learned that he would have been of age on Sunday, two days after the fatal accident. After the inquest, Undertaker Oliver removed the remains to his undertaking establishment where it was prepared for shipment. Telegrams were immediately sent his parents at Birmingham. An answer was received to ship the body by express, which was done on the 8:10 train Sunday morning. Immediately after Guest was removed from the wreckage the debris was set on fire by the workmen to facilitate the work of putting up a temporary structure.

Passengers from points south on the River division are transferred by hacks from Floyd's crossing to the Athens branch. The following is Fireman Moorehead's interview by the JOURNAL: "We were running about ten miles an hour and had just crossed the bridge when it suddenly dropped without shaking or swaying any. I turned a somersault and lit on the tender which broke loose from the engine and was ten or twelve feet below it. I saw a stringer sticking out over me. I got up under it and saw Norris' leg sticking out. I asked him if he was hurt; he said 'yes.' The blood was dripping down on me from a cut in his forehead. We got down from the pier but could not find Brown, so I went to the target and sent word in. Norris went back to the wreck and I came up town and had my arm fixed. This was my first trip out since the 13th of last November, when I had my arm broken in the same place. I did not know there were any tramps on the train."

The loss to the railroad company is estimated at $20,000. We have before us a copy of the Cornish Hawkeye, a bright, new paper, published in the capital of Sunday Creek. The paper is devoted to the local interests of the town and country round, and judging from the gleam of the news and the business columns, the Hawkeye nestles in a congenial realm, and looks out from the liveliest newspaper town in the county.

The Hawkeye is a welcome exchange, and we speak for it a wide horizon in its bird's eye view of the fat pickings in southern Perry.

THE ENCAMPMENT.

Veni, Vidi, Vici!

When the historian of the Fourteenth Regiment writes the chapter on the Encampment in Logan, the terse and comprehensive words of the Roman general will be the Red Letters of the text, "Came, saw, conquered."

The conquest of Logan was complete. The soldierly bearing, the gentlemanly courtesy, the gallantry in court and camp, captivated all hearts and Logan, Queen City that she is, in her real pride and princely beauty found for once in the Fourteenth Regiment a liege lord and master.

The men of the regiment are gentlemen. Indeed it is an imperative requisite of membership to be honorable and genteel. Their manliness was not left at home. The uniform did not get away with them. They showed good sense in this that the requirements of an encampment and the formalities of a soldier in service are subordinate to the American citizen, a sensible man everywhere and in all the relations of life, a gentleman.

It would be a tiring task to detail the affairs at camp. Every person in the county, interested in the soldiers, has been to camp and all have seen with their own eyes, and no dull pencil could tell any more than they know.

For future generations it may be recorded that the regiment disembarked, to use a naval term, at 12 o'clock, Friday, at Camp Logan.

A program of drill and parade was observed each day, with but slight variation.

Sunday was the day of big attendance. Excursions came from the river and the lake. It is estimated that 10,000 people were on the camp grounds. The railroad carried 12,000 people on that day, including those attending camp-meeting at Lancaster.

On Tuesday evening the Regimental Band visited the city and gave our citizens a delightful serenade from a platform on the Public Square.

A reception and ball was given to the officers and their guests Tuesday evening, at McCarthy's hall.

The band, noncommissioned officers and privates were given the same evening, a ball at Hartman's hall. Both are social events that will long be remembered by hosts and guests.

Gov. McKinley and staff visited the camp yesterday, Wednesday, and reviewed the regiment. The encampment closes tomorrow. No accident nor incident deserving mention, has occurred to embarrass the exercises or mar the pleasures of the occasion.

We hope the soldier boys may retain, as our citizens will, pleasant recollections of the visit, and as this chapter in their history may well be written in the words at first quoted, we complete the page, turn down the leaf, and inscribe in the finished record, "Fragrant with sweet memories."

The Citizen's Electric Light Co.

The council meets next Tuesday evening, at which time the contract with the electric light Co. will be signed. Purchases will be made for material and the work of erecting the plant begun. At the last meeting of the council, the contract was not prepared in every detail, and as it is very important that it be so worded that no double interpretation can be possibly made, that each side, council and company, say plainly what each agrees to do, time was required for careful examination.

This council and company understand each other. The word of honor is passed between them, the people by their vote approve the bargain. Hence it is important that bargain now made may be understood by the present contracting parties, let it be down in black and white, so that no trouble may come hereafter.

The company have the cash deposited, and the day following the signing of the contract, the work will begin, and pushed to completion, as rapidly as money and energy can avail.

OHIO'S SOCIAL STARS.

PROTRAITS AND BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES OF THE SOCIAL QUEENS OF THE HUCK- EYE STATE.

Ohio has reason to be proud of its beautiful and accomplished women; no State in the Union has greater warrant for such pride. All Ohioans, therefore should feel special interest in "Social Leaders of Ohio," published in Demorest's Family Magazine for September, which includes superb portraits and authentic biographical sketches of the best-known and most accomplished and beautiful women throughout the State. These representative portraits are from photographs collected especially for this purpose, and each picture is superb specimen of the highest style of modern reproductive art. The article is a graceful tribute to the mothers, wives, and daughters of Ohio; and this gallery of the State's beauties and celebrities is one which every Ohioan should possess and preserve, especially when the collection (which would cost, even if procurable at least $5.00 in any other way) can be got for only 20 cents, together with many other fine attractions of "Demorest's" is crowded. HIS PHIZ.

THE GERMAN EMPEROR DISTRIBUTES PHOTOGRAPHS.

Queen Victoria Finds the Doll She Played With Sixty Years Ago.

The New Opera Columbus—A Description of How It Is Arranged and the Probable Cost.

LEONARD, August 15.—The emperor of Germany has given his picture to Freiherr von Hammerstein-Tzartent who managed for him the recent encampment with the Duke of Cumberland and the Duke of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha. On the mat of the picture the emperor wrote, "The right remains over the right."

During his short reign the emperor has given away sixty of his pictures with his autographic attachment—more than Old William gave away in all the years he sat on the throne of United Germany. The rehearsals of Franchetti's new grand opera, "Columbus," were begun in the opera house this week. The opera will be produced for the first time on October 1, as the climax of the Columbus celebration. Persons who attended the rehearsals of the last few days say that the opera probably will be pronounced the composer's finest work. It is in three acts. The first represents the departure of Columbus the second, the voyage, the mutiny and the discovery of America; the third, the death of Columbus. The second act is scenically the finest. The concave background of the stage will be so arranged as to represent in quick and smooth succession the views of the moving ships. Day break and sunset at sea will be produced by entirely new stage mechanism. The mutiny, in which heavy action of the opera reaches its climax, breaks out at sunset. The sailors are on the deck. The hymn of praise of one of the gods of the opera, is at first interrupted. Then curses are heard, low at first, but gradually increasing in volume until they drown the hymn. In describing the mutiny the music is said to incorporate the finest work ever done by Franchetti. After quelling the mutiny Columbus appears on the ship's bridge, and a moment later cannon shots announce the discovery of the new continent. It has not yet been determined who will fill the role of Columbus. Several tenors will essay the part in rehearsals before the final decision will be reached.

Downing street has been the scene of great activity owing to the departure of the outgoing ministers, the transfer of the business of the government offices to the charge of the permanent subordinates ready to be turned over to the Liberal ministers, the packing up of personal effects for removal, etc. Groups of curious folk watched the departing ministers occasionally a cheer was raised for some minister of the past. There was an unusual number of visitors to-day to the House of Parliament. The center of attraction being the Chamber where the departing ministers were just being finished with the incoming of a new administration.

The Star expresses itself angrily over the departure of Lord Salisbury. It might the Tories appointed forty of their adherents to civil posts in Ireland and that out of the 20 appointments under the Salisbury Land Act 24 were of Unionists. These 20 appointments are to what is known as revising baristers.

The Chronicle says that the Radicals are eager to open fire upon the House of Lords. They declare that if the Lords evince a "nasty" disposition toward the House of Commons, he latter will at the first hint of trouble, refuse to vote the salaries of the officials connected with the House of Lords. The motto of the Radicals is "no nonsense from the House of Lords." It is hinted that the Queen's penchant for dolls lately developed is an evidence that she is bordering on her second childhood. The story is that Henry Russell, her private secretary, recently found a large collection of dolls dressed in costumes of all nations, being toys with which the Queen played when she was a child. The Queen was delighted with the find, and ordered the dolls sent to Osborne. There she seemed to grow more and more interested in a collection of her childhood days. She is said to have them arranged around the room and has photographs taken of them arranged in groups, seated on chairs, sofas, etc., in all sorts of combinations. She has also had an article prepared, recounting the discovery of the dolls and the pleasure she took in arranging them. The matter is treated by her majesty, from an artist's point of view, though it is said that no one else could see anything remarkable about the dolls or their dresses. It is understood that the article will shortly be published in some one of the periodicals which the Queen favors with her occasional literary efforts. The paragraph which recently appeared in a "society" paper, hinted at queer doings by a certain royal lady, is believed to have been based upon this affair of the dolls.

The stories of misery endured by German emigrants to the Argentine Republic are revived by the return to Hamburg of one hundred and eighty families, who are in a starving condition. The members of this unfortunate band tell pitiful tales of their experience in the Argentine, where work is scarce, wages are low and good land almost unobtainable.

Fresh approaches are being made to Count von Hatzfeld, German ambassador to Holland, to induce him to resign, owing to his affiliations with the Bismarcks. The count is a very influential personage, and the emperor's desire to get rid of him has not yet reached the point where it is likely to lead to his actual dismissal.

The Goethe society of Weimar, has issued an appeal to admirers of Goethe and Schiller, urging the erection by contributions of a joint monument and a library in honor of the two great poets by their friends and contemporaries the golden wedding of the Duke of Saxe-Weimar.

A KNOTTY QUESTION

RAISED AS TO THE PRESIDENT'S APPOINTMENT

Of Three of His Monetary Commissioners to the International Conference—Are They Constitutionally Eligible?

WASHINGTON, August 15.—A very knotty question is raised as to the constitutionality of the appointment by President Harrison of Senators Allison of Iowa; Jones of Nevada; and Congressman McCleary of Kentucky, as commissioners to the proposed International Monetary conference. The point involves a construction of the sixth section of Article I, of the constitution of the United States, which reads as follows: "No senator or representative shall, during the time for which he was elected, be appointed to any civil office under the authority of the United States, which shall have been created, or the emoluments whereof shall have been increased during such time; and no person holding any office under the United States shall be member of either house during its continuance in office."

In support of the position that the appointments of the gentlemen named are in violation of this article of the constitution, reference is made to the fact that Samuel J. Kirkwood, Mr. Allison's former colleague, was held to be ineligible for the position of tariff commissioner to which he was appointed by President Arthur, because that position had been created by an act of congress passed during the term of which he was elected senator from Iowa, although previous to the passage of the act he had resigned his seat in the senate and had become Secretary of the Interior under President Harrison. The accuracy of the ruling in Mr. Kirkwood's case has been questioned and it is contended that even if it should be held as good constitutional law there is a marked difference between a civil office created within the borders of the United States with a stated salary and a mere authorization contained in an appropriation bill for the services of the department of justice at present absent from the city. The question will probably be brought to their attention on their return.

American Florists.

WASHINGTON, D. C., August 15.—Preparations are being made for the assembling of a National convention of American Florists which is to meet in this city Tuesday and continue three days. The body met in Canada last year, and the Washington members persuaded the others to gather this year in this city, where so much has been done to advance floriculture. The superintendent of the botanical gardens of Washington is the vice-president of the organization. The society has 200 members in different parts of the country, and these, with their wives and friends will number, it is thought, at least 3,000 visitors. A special train of sixteen cars will start from Boston, having on board the members of that city. They will be joined at New York by the New York Florist society, who will enter them at breakfast and they will lunch as the guests of the Philadelphia organization, who will afterward accompany them to this city.
